Hiring Manager

{company name}

To the hiring manager,

I am writing to you today to express my interest in the position of Software Developer, found on your website. I feel that I would not only be a good candidate, but be the best candidate for the job. I am graduating from my program at George Brown College in May, and although I have one semester remaining out of 6 total, I am maintaining a GPA of 3.80 while balancing working part time and raising a family. I believe that my personal drive, commitment to quality work, and ability to manage time will make me a very successful contributor to any project sent my way.

In my current role as a Full Stack Software engineer at Step Sciences, I have been tasked with building a fully customized client management system to track customer data, orders, and automate the completion of all paperwork. Errors were reduced up to 90% from migrating data input from excel sheets to full stack applications with convenient user interfaces and data validation. I was the only engineer in this start-up environment, where I learned to manage business and time expectations, and refined my professional communication skills.

I am particularly excited to work for {company name} as a developer who has a keen interest in developing secure software and working among other professionals. I would love to be a part of this team, and in the future lead projects that will produce high quality results in the years to come. I appreciate your time and consideration, and look forward to hearing from you in the future,

Sincerely,

Ethan Sylvester
